

Musky Madness

September 22-23-24, 2018
Northern Wisconsin

THE MUSKY

If there's another freshwater fish that evokes the same awe and passion, I'd be hard-pressed to name it. I admit to you that I've been badly bitten by the musky-bug, particularly watching one of these fish come to a fly!

I'd like to share the magic with you.

To this end, I've organized a dedicated team of guides and a small group of fly fishermen to fish some of the best musky water in the upper-Midwest. We call it, "Musky Madness", and this will be our fifth year.

EXPECTATIONS

Arguably, musky fishing is not for everyone, and while I certainly don't want to sound discouraging... I do want you to have reasonable expectations about the trip. I don't like to disappoint my friends.

All guides have different thoughts about it, but I think it's safe to say most would agree that a couple of follows or "eats" is a good day of musky fishing.

In my limited experience, it's not uncommon to go days without seeing a musky. But, when everything comes together, it's possible to see multiple fish and for each angler to have multiple eats. A musky to the boat is a rare and mystical occurrence, and it's our goal that everyone experiences it.

For this year's event, we've chosen an extremely target-rich location with short drives to multiple floats on the Chippewa and Flambeau Rivers of northern Wisconsin.

Over the course of the trip, you can also expect to catch a few smallmouth bass and northern pike.

GUIDES

With the exception of myself (there's a good reason I'm on the bottom of the following list) the guides I've assembled are all very knowledgeable about guiding fly fishermen to musky on rivers. I know these gentlemen well, and would fish with any of them, anywhere, any time.

Dan Boggs

I met Dan several years ago at the Great Waters Fly Fishing Expo, and we became fast friends. Dan is a very experienced and knowledgeable fly fisherman, and one of the most enthusiastic guides I've ever spent time with. He has developed a great reputation guiding the rivers of the upper Midwest for smallmouth bass, northern pike and musky. Dan is also an FFF Certified Casting Instructor.

Brad Bohan

I've known Brad for nearly 2 decades, and Lisa and I are proud to call him our friend. Brad is arguably a forerunner of what has become a very big deal...catching musky on the fly. I think it's safe to say that he knows as much about fly fishing for musky as anyone. His passion for musky, and innovations in nearly every aspect of fishing for them has changed the way others approach these trophy fish.

Brad lives and works, as a full-time musky guide on the water we plan to fish. He also holds the Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame record for a released musky on a fly... an impressive 51-inch fish.

If you'd like to know more about Brad, and what he does, check out, Musky Country Outfitters.

Gabe Schubert

Gabe and I enjoy the same circle of friends, but incredibly, we'd not met until we guided a musky trip together in 2012. I know very few fly fishermen who have the same breadth of knowledge and passion for musky and musky fishing as Gabe. So much so, that he has become known locally as "Musky Jesus". I'm a firm believer in Gabe and the musky flies he ties. I look forward to working with Gabe again on our musky trip.

Tony Stifter

I've known Tony for for a couple of decades now, and have spent a lot of time with him in the field and on the water. I've never met a more focused or competent outdoorsman. He's also a wonderful communicator and enjoys teaching his fishermen everything he knows about catching musky on the fly. Lisa and I were thrilled that he agreed to join our team last year and look forward to all the positive energy he brings to the trip.

Luke Swanson

I heard about Luke for many years, and finally met him when he dropped by to visit Musky Madness a few years ago. Luke was born and raised in Minnesota, on the banks of the Mississippi, and has fished for smallmouth bass and musky his whole life. He has guided in Alaska on the Alagnak River.

Luke owns Livin' the Dream Guide Service. Make sure to watch the video that he captured at Musky Madness 2016, where he guided his fisherman to a 49.75 inch musky. We're excited to have Luke on the team!

Kip Veith

I've known Kip for a long time and have enjoyed watching him develop a stellar reputation and a life for himself guiding in the upper Midwest. I've worked with Kip on multiple occasions and I'm always impressed with his professionalism. Kip is an Orvis endorsed guide, and in 2015, he was awarded Orvis - Guide of the Year. Count on Kip to provide you with a casting tune-up on the lawn if you'd like!

YOUR HOST BobWhite

I've guided and fished for 65 seasons between Alaska and Patagonia, but I'm new to the musky game. Our guides, on the other hand, are dedicated professionals when it comes to catching musky on the fly. So, I leave the guiding to them... I wouldn't want any of you to get the short end of the stick!

I will be on the water, however, following some of you down the river, bantering with your guides, and joining you for lunch. Count on hearing the same old jokes that I've been telling for years, but laugh at them anyway, would you? I'm very sensitive that way.

You should also know that I take my sardines very seriously!

EQUIPMENT

Flies – Tying flies that muskies eat is a fine art, and every guide has his own idea about what works best. If you have some flies you want to bring, or need an excuse to visit your local fly shop, by all means, do so... but you'll probably want to fish with whatever your guide has tied because he knows how they work, and believes in them.

All of the guides will have flies available for sale. Good musky flies are tied on select hooks, with premium materials, and average around $30.00 each. It's a good thing they're fished with shock-tippets of 80-pound fluorocarbon or steel wire!

Rods – It's recommended that you have at least one or two 10 to 12-weight rods (12-weight preferred). You'll be glad to have the extra muscle when casting large flies, or trying to stop a big fish from getting into a woodpile.

We all have our favorite rod manufacturers, but it isn't necessary to spend an exorbitant amount of money on a good fly rod these days. Let me know if you'd like some recommendations.

Reels – Any large, single action fly reel that's matched to the line it holds will do the job. It's unusual for musky to make long, sustained runs in a river, but a trust-worthy drag is always a good thing. Large arbor reels have the added advantage of quick line retrieval. Besides having a dependable drag, I recommend that you fish with a reel that's comfortable, and you know well.

Lines – You'll undoubtedly use large flies, which are best fished suspended in the water-column. Sinking tip lines manage this best. A good friend of mine feels that intermediate tip lines are good, full intermediate lines are better, and sink tip lines are best.

Most agree upon these line recommendations (by grain weight) for the following rod weights:

- 10wt - 400
- 11wt - 450
- 12wt – 500

The exception to this is if the angler will be spending a lot of time on shallower water. In this case an intermediate tip or full intermediate is best.

There are a number of manufacturers and lines to choose from:

- Rio Outbound
- RioVersi-Tip System
- Scientific Angler's Streamer Express (26 foot tip)
- Scientific Angler's Wet Tip Express
- Air Flo Bass Musky Fly Line

Leaders & Shock Tippet – This is one area that's best left to your guide. All musky guides have their own leader/shock-tippet systems that they know, and trust. If the leader or shock-tippet fails (God forbid) you'll be happy to have had nothing to do with it!

If you'd like to help the guides out, you might have some Teeny 7.5' Pat Ehlers Hand-Tied Pike/Musky Leaders in your boat bag.

THE USUAL STUFF NOT TO FORGET - Waders, raingear, warm layers, warm hat, polarized glasses, sense of humor, etc.
